The Coal Combustion Products Partnership (C²P²) program is a cooperative effort between United States Environmental Protection Agency, American Coal Ash Association, Utility Solid Waste Activities Group, and United States Department of Energy to help promote the beneficial use of Coal Combustion Products (CCPs) and the environmental benefits that result from their use. C²P² will develop resources such as technical assistance publications, workshops, and a Web site. Organizations can participate in C²P² as Champions and/or Leaders:

Champions include generators, marketers, and users of CCPs who, in joining the program, will commit to increasing CCP use or marketing of CCPs.

Leaders include federal agencies, professional groups, research organizations, trade associations, and CCP marketers who, in joining the program, will work with their affiliated organizations to promote greater use and sale of CCPs.

Both Champions and Leaders will be eligible for awards recognizing their activities, particularly documented increases in CCP use.

For more information, visit the C²P² Web site at <http://www.epa.gov/epaoswer/osw/conserv/c2p2/>.
